

UNIVERSITY/COLLEGE MEMBERSHIPS

As an advocate for the park and recreation field, CPRS serves not only educators and students, but also the institutions for which they are affiliated. The Society focuses on issues important to higher education, such as budgets and hiring trends. Educators and students keep abreast of issues, such as legislation that can affect annual budgets. Universities and colleges, as members of CPRS, participate in scholarships offered by the CPRS Foundation.

Universities and colleges enjoy special benefits with their membership:

- One professional membership
- One annual conference registration
- One booth at annual conference for $50 (on a space available basis)
- One subscription to the quarterly publication, California Parks & Recreation, including the annual membership directory and resource guide, keeping educators and students informed on current issues affecting the park and recreation field
- One subscription to the monthly Job Line...and news from CPRS
- One free Job Line listing per year and 15% off additional job listings
- Free intern job listings in the monthly Job Line (on a space available basis)
- Free access to CPRS database for defined queries

Educators and students of member institutions benefit, too, with a ten dollar CPRS dues discount and expanded access to the resources offered by CPRS.
